The Year of the Greatest Norwich Celebration Is Advancing.

The short Spring painting season will be all too short to brighten up the 4000 homes of the city. Those who begin early will escape the dust and filth of Summer.

The SHERWIN-WILLIAMS line is the best because it has the greatest variety of tints to choose; it has greater penetrating qualities; it is mixed the right consistency to leave a sufficient protective coat on the wood; the colors are permanent.

THE SUPREME PASSION.
Rev. C. C. Luther Opens Evangelistic Services at First Baptist Church.

Rev. C. C. Luther began his series of meetings at the First Baptist church Tuesday afternoon with a talk to the young people. Mr. Luther has a strong appeal to the children and no doubt the illustrated or chalk talks which are to be held each evening this week will grow both in attendance and interest.

There was a good attendance at the evening service despite the unfavorable weather, much evening in lieu of the afternoon meeting a prelude meeting of fifteen minutes is held before the evening service. The subject for this week's meeting is "Prayer."

The subject at the prelude meeting tonight is How to Pray and Get the Things We Ask For, and at the regular meeting The Greatest Work on Earth.

Mr. Luther's theme, The Supreme Passion, is found in the statement of the Apostle Paul recorded in Rom. 8: 1-3, expressive of his willingness to be "accursed from Christ," if by such sacrifice his kinsmen could be saved.

Mr. Luther interpreted as Paul's emphatic way of expressing his love for the immortal part of man, his love for the soul, the evangelist thought, was one of the greatest lacks today. There is abundant evidence of a widespread and intense desire for the improvement of the physical, mental, and social condition of man, a vast amount of brain work and of the largest expenditure of money and new schemes and devices are being devised for the ill that afflict society.

And the largest part of it is by prayer. And the greatest need of the hour is for the Christian; in fact, it may easily be recognized as one of the legitimate fruits of Christianity. Nor may any word of discredit justly be said against it.

For the salvation of the body, the expansion of the mind, the enlightenment of the life that now is, millions of money and countless words, electric energy, and all-consuming concerns, are being expended for the redemption, the sanctification and eternal glorification of the inner, the immortal part of man, his few are ever awayed by the supreme passion of Paul. The prevailing type of piety today is of the preserve kind, here is the bottled and sealed and kept in a dark place to keep it from spoiling. As for such a thing as a heart for the lost man, he has yet to learn by personal experience the meaning and the blessedness of it.

Here is the explanation in large measure of the failure of Christians to make successfully operative the great command to disciple all nations, and here is the solution of the perplexing problem facing Christian workers everywhere, how to reach the unchurched masses. More of that passion for souls that has always characterized the genuinely successful old evangelist is needed.

Just as in business, success is proportioned, other things being equal, upon the amount of heart one puts into it, so in this soul saving business success depends more upon the heart than upon the head. People have got to be moved to Christ rather than argued into faith. There is no argument like the heart argument, and a glance over the pages of history shows that all great soul winners have been characterized above all else with this consuming, all-absorbing passion for souls.

This passion could be obtained by seeking to apprehend the divine value of souls, by contemplating those possibilities of heaven that are ours, and by seeing the need of the lost.

Adalid E. Stevenson will retire from law business and will continue to establish the La Salle Extension university.

OBITUARY.
Harry M. Thompson.

(Contributed.)
I read of the death of Harry M. Thompson of North Stonington last week with keen regret. Less than a month ago I visited him at his home and found him in spite of his shattered body in excellent spirits, confident of recovery. He was planning a home trip for the coming summer and displayed an enthusiasm uncommon among invalids. It is not a new experience to see a friend battling bravely for life today and gone tomorrow—so to speak but it leaves, nevertheless, a pang that strikes deep into the heart. It seems only a short time ago that Harry M. Thompson and I were boys together and I can only record happy memories of our association. I recall particularly his unselfish spirit and loyalty. My sympathy goes out to his parents, sisters and brother, and I know it is shared by all who knew him.

"Farewell, dear friend! We leave him here and weep the sympathetic tear. Full mournful are our throats to know such is the fate of all below. Let hope dispense the clouds of gloom. That hover darkly round the tomb. When she proclaims our sad demise. May be the path to Paradise."

Mrs. Harry A. Smith.

The death of Harriet E. wife of Harry A. Smith, occurred at her home in Mansfield, about seven o'clock on Tuesday evening, March 7, 1933, after a long illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Smith was born in East Haddam May 18, 1855, the daughter of David and Eliza Grant Mitchell. She married Harry A. Smith and for many years she has resided at Mansfield.
